Serious discussion set on bond issue

With a citizens committee backing of the tentative conclusions they'd reached over the past two years, Canyon school board members will begin Monday serious discussions on a bond issue to construct two new schools in the north part of the district.

Members of the Sound Financing Committee, a citizens group formed in August to study ways to finance new schools, voted unanimously Thursday night to recommend to the board that a new elementary school and a new high school be built in the Gene Howe area of the district and that the construction be financed by a bond issue.

Supt. Jerry Jacobs said Friday the recommendations of the committee will be presented to the school board during a session Monday night following a joint city commission-school board meeting which is to begin at 8 p.m. at the community center.

The board is also to meet in executive session Monday to discuss an offer from Wilton White, representative of the developers of the Estacado Estates subdivision just south of Amarillo, of acreage within the development for location of a new elementary school.

The offer was made two weeks ago during a board meeting. If the board accepts the offer, construction must begin on an elementary school at the site within one year after the deed is transferred.

Recommendations passed Thursday night by the Sound Financing Committee coincide with the opinions of Jacobs, whose staff has provided input to the citizens group and has studied the problem of new facilities for about two years.

"I don't think we have a choice if we're going to put kids in classrooms," Jacobs told The News. "We've got to do something. It's just that critical."

"You can sit here and visualize that by the time we get schools built we'll have another 400 to 500 or 600 kids."

Growth projections considered by the committee indicate growth rates are highest in the Gene Howe area of the school district, an area which now has about 50 per cent of the district population and which pays about 50 per cent of the school taxes.

Jacobs said there are right now about 170 homes under construction in the district and others on the drawing boards for construction after the first of the year.

School board members Monday night are expected to discuss a probable date to call a bond election to give voters the opportunity to say yes or no to an issue of between $5 and $6 million in bonds to finance the new construction project.

Jacobs told committee members Thursday night the board may choose to by-pass the Nov. 4 constitutional amendment election date for the bond election since the November balloting is expected to draw a significant negative voter response.

Tentatively, he said, it might be wiser for the board to call the bond election for the first week of December.

"People who study these things say if you're running into a negative situation, sometimes it's wise to stay off these kinds of dates," he said.

More time is needed, too, he said, to allow the Committee for Quality Education, another citizens group, to complete its study of what facilities should be included in new schools.

And, more time is needed to inform citizens about the facts and figures surrounding the need for expanded facilities for the district, he said.

No precise cost estimate has been given on the construction cost of schools, but Jacobs told members of the Vocational Education Advisory Council at noon Thursday, he hopes the per square foot cost for new construction will be near the $30 mark.

The new elementary school will be designed for about 450 students. (See BOND Page 7)

Canyon High School cheerleaders lead students in cheers Friday afternoon just before the Eagles took on the tough AAAA Pampa Harvesters in Kimbrough Stadium. The pep rally was held on the square in Canyon, but the cheers weren't enough to push the Eagles past a Pampa team which wound up victorious 20-7.

Setting of planned movie to be Palo Duro Canyon

BY LORENA MILLER

"Goodnight," a story about the life of Col. Charles Goodnight, will be an upcoming film for Peter Breck Productions of which television movie actor, Peter Breck, is the owner.

"We'll start filming in Palo Duro Canyon in about six to eight months, hopefully," stated the actor as he addressed students and local residents in the Intimate Theatre of the Fine Arts Building at West Texas State University Friday afternoon.

"The film about Goodnight's life will cover his Indian Scouting Days down to his entrance into the beautiful Palo Duro Canyon," related Breck.

"We've already been talking to folks around Canyon who knew the famous Colonel," he related. Breck is presently in the Canyon-Amarillo area for the Amarillo Little Theatre production of "Mister Roberts." He was introduced to the student audience Friday afternoon by Peter Fox, ALT director.

Although the "Mr. Roberts" production closed this week end, Breck stated that he'll "be back in six to eight weeks to walk over the Palo Duro and get a feel for his upcoming movie there."

"I'll bring in some key people from the coast for major roles and the camera crew," he stated adding that he plans to hire extras from this area.

Breck, an independent freelance actor, studied at the University of Houston during the time when the drama department there was set up in a "quonset hut." He played "Stalag 17" with community theatre in Houston along with several other roles before deciding to "hit the road."

On the road, Breck played Victor Prim in "Private Lives" by Noel Coward and stated that he "learned that role in a 12 hour period."

"Then it was New York, and a one room flat — 5 stories up" for the struggling actor who played about 140 productions in 26 states before he was found.

Breck was found by Robert Mitchum and played his first movie role in "Thunder Road" after which the late Dick Powell introduced him into television via series roles in "Black Saddle" and "The Big Valley."

As "Nick Barkley" in "The Big Valley", Breck has played many seasons as a series regular for television productions and attributes the "40 stitches" of his career to the fact that he feels it important that he do his own stunt work.

"People think it's glamorous — but it's really hard work, a tough business," he cautioned the university drama students.

"You can't demonstrate your merchandise," he stated. "All you have to sell is wrapped up in yourself — and you have to get that across to the buying public."

"Sometimes it takes years of 'ketchup soup' and selling your own 'blood' to get that break," he cautioned.

Ruling on various school fees to cost taxpayers here $20,000

A Thursday ruling by the Texas Attorney General declaring unconstitutional fees charged by public schools for various items can be expected to add another $30,000 to a 1976 Canyon school budget which is already suffering an overload of state-mandated fiscal burdens.

Atty. Gen. John Hill ruled Thursday fees charged by public schools for such things as workbooks, driver education, band uniforms, laboratory supplies and club memberships are unconstitutional unless the legislature specifically authorizes them.

Canyon School Supt. Jerry Jacobs said the ruling will cost local taxpayers another $30,000 for the upcoming school year.

That includes about $20,000 the school must make up for fees now charged local school children for various extraneous items and about $10,000 for summer driver education classes, the cost of which is now borne by the students.

With the new ruling, local taxpayers can expect to have to cough up the $30,000 on top of about $130,000 recent legislation in Austin requires.

Those figures don't include, either, the possible addition in next year's budget of indebtedness payments which will be required at some future time to pay off a proposed $5 million to $6 million bond issue now being contemplated for construction of two new schools in the north part of the district.

School district taxpayers had their taxes raised this year by seven cents per $100 to cover new costs incurred as a result of the last legislative session and Jacobs has told various groups through the summer and fall that the district will have to bear even more of the burden for local education next year due to the legislative enactments.

"We've charged fees for workbooks and extraneous supplies for years and years and years," Jacobs said Friday. "I know we've been charging fees every since I was in school."

But, Jacobs said the full impact of the decision won't be known until more information is made available through the Texas Education Agency, the commissioner of which sought the opinion from Hill in the first place.

The fees charged locally, Jacobs said, are well justified since in every case they defray expenses which would not normally be incurred otherwise. He cited as an example the fee charged for band uniforms use noting that the fee pays for cleaning of the uniforms and to maintain-

Veep defends student evaluation; council backs off on support vote

West Texas State University's faculty council backed off Friday from full-fledged support of a spring 1975 council recommendation that student evaluation of faculty be handled only at departmental level.

They agreed, rather, after hearing a 2-hour presentation on student evaluations by Dr. Ray Malzahn, academic vice president, to discuss the issue again at a later meeting.

"It seems like Malzahn has rejected our recommendation of last year," said Dr. Darrell Munsell, referring to a recommendation passed by the council in March 1975.

"That's a fair statement," quipped Bob Muir, another council member, and other members nodded agreement.

"Since he has rejected the recommendation of last year, perhaps we should inform the faculty of that and ask for advice from the faculty on what to do next," Munsell suggested.

This late-meeting discussion of the issue was ruled out of order by Faculty Council Chairman Dr. Walter Shelly, who indicated the matter would be discussed more fully in another meeting in two weeks.

Earlier in the meeting, following Malzahn's presentation, Munsell had moved that the current council go on record as readopting the March 1975 recommendation of the council which stated: "... that student evaluation of instruction be a departmental concern with all of the details being handled internally at the departmental and faculty level."

Currently, student evaluation of faculty is handled on a university-wide basis and the evaluations are used by the university promotion and tenure committee to decide who among the faculty will be promoted and given tenure.

Munsell withdrew his motion, however, after noting that the recommendation from last year's council stands unchanged because the council is a continuing body.

Malzahn, during his presentation, called on the council to allow him to make a similar presentation to the faculty of all schools and colleges of the university this fall with the council conducting a follow-up poll on faculty opinion on what form student evaluation should take.

Malzahn questioned the validity of a faculty poll taken last year by the council and, a poll the results of which were used to form the basis of the recommendation that student

Suit asks for removal of area bank president

A civil suit filed this week by the former president of Randall County's Western National Bank on behalf of other stockholders seeks to unseat current bank president Roy Whittenburg of Amarillo.

It is the second suit filed in recent months by Jack Huddleston against Whittenburg, who is the major stockholder in the bank.

Although the case is styled Western National Bank, plaintiff, vs. Roy Whittenburg, defendant, Huddleston has filed the suit under a class action section of the Texas civil court procedural rules.

Huddleston alleges Whittenburg as president of the bank has not "properly performed the duties of such office, and, to the contrary has abused his position and the emoluments of his office to his own personal gain and benefit and that of his immediate family."

A previous suit filed by Huddleston, who was removed as president of the bank early this year, sought money damages alleging Whittenburg forced his removal.

Alleging that Whittenburg controls or owns more than 50 per cent of the outstanding stock in the bank, the suit alleges misconduct on several occasions. It alleges that prior to Whittenburg becoming president on Jan. 14, 1975, the prominent Amarillo businessman "specifically instructed and caused its officers to deposit with another bank the approximate sum of one-half million dollars as a compensating balance, with such balance making possible a personal loan for his immediate family."

This money, not being on deposit with the plaintiff bank, was not available for the bank's usage and plaintiff lost the profit it could have made from loaning such sums," the suit contends. "The officers of the bank complained numerous times, but the

Commissioner's land decision will have little impact on schools

The short-term impact of a Wednesday Texas education commissioner's decision to back an effort to detach 160 acres of development land from the Canyon school district to the Amarillo district will probably be negligible, according to local school officials.

The long-term impact of the decision, which supports a favorable decision made in October 1974 by the Randall County Board of School Trustees, is more nebulous.

The significance of the state official's decision, which will stand unless the Canyon school board appeals the verdict to the Texas Board of Education, was reduced somewhat last April when, local officials believe, the complexion of the county school board changed.

While Amarillo school board officials, particularly Pete Dallas, a prominent banker, have stated publicly the decision by the county trustees and the education commissioner to allow the 160-acre Glendale subdivision to be annexed by the Amarillo district from Canyon sets a favorable precedent for other future attempts at annexation, Canyon Supt. Jerry Jacobs, for example, believes the short-term precedent is virtually non-existent.

Jacobs points to the far more important fact that the membership on the county school board, which is the decision-making body at the local level which decides boundary questions, has changed substantially since the petition of five Glendale families for detachment and annexation was voted on last October.

The county board, for years a body with little influence, became the focal point for a controversial move by the Amarillo school district to gain new lands to the south and southwest of Amarillo two years ago. At that time, county board members were approached individually by Amarillo school board members about the possibility of allowing Amarillo to annex about 11 sections of Canyon school land southwest of Amarillo.

While that effort fizzled, largely because the Canyon school board declined to consider the proposal favorably, Glenn O'Dell was successful in an effort generated by several families in his Glendale development to have the tract's detachment from the Canyon district viewed favorably by the county school board.

After the filing of a lawsuit contesting the election of several of the county board members, the board in October decided on a 3-2 vote to allow the Amarillo district to annex the land.

Voting in favor of the motion for annexation were Don Marsh, a South Amarillo accountant who was outspoken in his support of the annexation, J.D. Barker, a Canyon attorney, and Joe Turpin, a north Randall County farmer.

Voting against the motion were Board President R.B. Gist Jr., a Canyon area farmer, and Charles Purcell, a Gene Howe area businessman.

Since the October decision was made, however, the board's majority attitude may have shifted with the removal of Marsh and his replacement by South Amarillo insurance man Gordon Hendricks.

Hendricks, who has not yet publicly stated his opinion on the annexation of school lands by Amarillo, was appointed to serve on the board after his name was drawn from a hat. The precinct Hendricks represents is in the unusual situation of lying wholly within the Amarillo school district and, according to state attorney general's opinions, voters in the

No stand required on constitution

Randall County commissioners should take no group stand on the Texas Constitution proposed for adoption on the Nov. 4 ballot.

Commissioners are now considering a resolution authored by County Judge Woody Pond, which calls on voters here to turn down all proposals on the ballot.

Our argument is not that voters should not turn down all proposals, but that it is not within the purview of the commissioners court to urge the voters to do anything on the issue.

Randall County's commissioners are elected as representative of the people to do those things for the people and make those decisions for the people which the people individually or collectively cannot do or make for themselves. That is the essence of representative democracy.

It does not follow, then, that where the people themselves are given the opportunity and, in fact, have the obligation, to make their own decision, that the county commissioners should attempt to impose their thinking on the thinking of the population.

Where the people are given a say, they should have the say. Commissioners need not and should not take a stand when the people are empowered to make their own decision.

Of course, the commissioners are motivated by politics. They fear the new constitution, and perhaps, rightly so. Individually, there is nothing wrong with them expressing their feelings about the constitution. But collectively, the act smacks too much of self-interest.

Notwithstanding the fact that commissioners should not participate as a court in the decision-making process which is left to the people, we fully expect a positive vote on the resolution presented by Pond.

We would hope, though, that voters here will examine the reasons for the vote and will demand that commissioners lay out in detail those specific sections of the proposed document which they validly and logically feel are detrimental to the citizens of Randall County. — C.W.

Measure of maturity

A recent study published in Adolescence Magazine notes that teenage high school girls find most desirable in boys the following traits: good personality, good looks, good physique, good behavior, sincerity and neatness in personal appearance.

For some reason, the girls omitted what could be argued the most important traits in any person: character, integrity, intelligence, ambition, courage, unselfishness, emotional maturity.

While it might be argumentative and therefore fun to speculate that teenagers today are more shallow than they used to be, or that television has influenced them in a negative sense, or that parental influence has diminished, or that church is no longer a significant factor in a teenager's life, it is probably more logical that the teenager is simply not mature enough himself to make good judgements.

If this is the case and the above study is representative, it would be more interesting to speculate on what study indicates in view of the lowering of the voting age, student evaluation of college faculty, student demands for representation on faculty committees, and on and on.

But it would probably be even more interesting to see if these attitudes have been altered by creeping age, only a slight indication of emotional maturity. How would older folks respond to the same study questionnaire?

Judging by today's divorce rate, we think such a study would be unnecessary. — C.W.

People are people

The recent furor over President Ford's persistence in shaking hands with the throngs and the resulting attempts to take his life by gun joins a long list of other national disgraces, which, oddly enough, have drawn silence from some editorialists and Easterners who a decade ago and more were in the forefront of those who berated the South, Texas and Dallas as menacing manifestations of human nature at its worst.

With a degree of resentment still, we remember those editorialists who proclaimed the South unfit for human habitation because of race riots in the '50s and '60s, because of the abhorrent behavior of a lone assassin who took the life of President Kennedy in Dallas.

Dallas, specifically, and Texas, in general, was held up as a grim and anti-social place, mecca for modern-day gunslingers and others of misanthropic nature.

The South, Northern and Eastern legislators vowed during periods of racial unrest, was alone in its torment of minorities and must be brought to heel.

Race riots in Detroit, Los Angeles and other major Eastern and Western cities, of course, proved that bigotry is not allocated along geographic lines.

The pervasive feeling, then, that the South stood alone as a harbor for racial hate, was dispelled by the fact of burning and looting in other urban areas.

Evidence mounts daily that Dallas has been vindicated and perhaps the editorialists should turn their wrath on California as the haven for social miscreants.

California, for example, has been the site of the Robert Kennedy assassination, the Tate-LaBianca murders, the mass murder of farm workers, Patty Hearst and her band of zealots, the Zebra killings, and now two attempts to assassinate President Ford.

The point is, of course, that America is far too large and diverse a place for any particular region, with its variety of types of people, to be blamed for any particular social or individual injustice.

People are pretty much the same everywhere, and nuts are nuts no matter whether they be in Canyon or Los Angeles. — C.W.

Democracy is not for everyone

BY CARROLL WILSON

Thanks to Charnazel Dutt, a native Indian who teaches at West Texas State University, Canyon residents have been given a little different perspective on the situation in India since Indira Gandhi's power grab than emerges from the national news media.

In the world of international power politics, the United States has been successfully backed into a defensive position by the Russians and Chinese, a position not easily defended.

The position we are made to feel we must adamantly defend is that democracy is the right and logical governmental system for every country in the world. The over-simplified view of international relations which places the Soviet Union and Chinese on one side of the ideological fence with the United States on the other encourages this position.

Our first reaction, for example, on hearing Mrs.

Dutt, who just returned from a trip to India to visit her family, praise the efficiency of the Indian government these days under Mrs. Gandhi's iron fist is skepticism.

Mrs. Dutt reports that "... the trains in India, which were running from five to seven hours late, are now running exactly on time."

A United States defender of democracy must gulp to suppress the desire to note the strange similarity between this comment and the boast of Mussolini that he made the trains of Italy run on time.

But, this is hardly the point. The point is, as Mrs. Dutt points out, that democracy is a rather sophisticated governmental system, one not particularly adaptable to a country where the population is largely illiterate.

That democracy is not the most successful form of government for a large number of the world's economically poorer and more unsophisticated peoples has been borne out, particularly in the mid-decades of this century when America, wild with democratic zeal, tried to force democratic implementation in various Third World nations only to find that dictatorship of whatever stripe was more suitable.

The U.S. stance has realistically in more recent years been to support the more benign dictatorships — Franco in Spain, the colonels in Greece.

The American people must understand in interpreting the actions of our national leadership that democracy is not for everyone, that to defend democracy across-the-board and export it as a major commodity is bound to fail, and that we cannot long remain strong in international politics by defending a position not of our own making, but thrust upon us by those who would sneer at the obvious successes of democracy in a country totally suited to its unusual demands and eccentricities.

Our world

U. S. lacks backbone

By ANN BROWN

In the August issue of Reader's Digest, Joseph Alsop diagnosed the malaise of America.

Alsop, a nationally syndicated columnist for 26 years, has covered every major conflict and challenge relating to the United States since World War II.

America's problem, as Alsop sees it, is not lack of armaments, as woeful as it is, but the sheer lack of will to defend our Country.

Anyone who questions Alsop's diagnosis should try interrogating the average college class on the subject.

The majority of draft-age men are quite cynical about the "rich man's war and poor man's fight."

The young men are convinced that the Rockefeller and their ilk have been promoting wars for generations so they could sell arms and ammunition to both sides.

Now that we have a Rockefeller in Washington pulling the strings, the potential defenders of our Country are more determined than ever not to be used for pawns in any national chess game.

The sage French analyst, Raymond Aron said, "A great power is not characterized by millions of tons of steel or millions of megatons, but primarily and above all by will."

How many nations have been rescued by Americans simply because they did not have the will to defend themselves?

Back in the early 30's if either France or England had said to Germany, "Cease and desist," there would probably have been no World War II.

But because France and England lacked the will to defend their weaker neighbors, American boys had to go over and save Europe from extermination.

And because American politicians were foolish enough to call a wolf to help them fight a dog, the wolf took the game, and now stands ready to devour us.

America has rescued Europe twice when they lacked the wisdom and will to defend themselves. But who will rescue America?

In their recent world-wide naval war games, the Soviets had the audacity to make a mock assault on the U.S. with sea-borne nuclear weapons.

Will their next assault be a game?

The women who saw their fathers, husbands, and brothers go to Europe to fight two wars to "make the world safe from war" are not anxious to send their sons to fight another useless war.

The debacle of Vietnam was enough to destroy the will of the most courageous patriot.

Vietnam was not lost, however, by the lack of courage on the part of the men who did the fighting, but on the lack of will to win of the politicians who pulled the strings.

We must not, however, let discouragement lead us to reject an economic and social system that has produced goods and services in quantities never before known to human society.

Whatever its shortcomings, America has made the greatest contribution to the spiritual, social, and economic freedom of the human race of any nation in recorded history.

The cynics who warn young Americans to avoid old pitfalls may be leading them into an abyss from which there is no escape.

So our system is not perfect, and we have been betrayed in the past. What we need is optimists and idealists to develop the means to improve our Country, and help us climb to new heights.

We do not need cynics to destroy our will to survive, and to defend ourselves.

Letter To The Editor

Statement wrong

To the Editor:

With the kind help of your newspaper, I would like to make a public statement concerning a portion of the testimony made against Dr. Emilio Caballero in his recent trial.

During the testimony (not under oath) it was stated that during a conversation I had with a member of the Art faculty, I made a statement that it was my opinion that Dr. Caballero knew in advance that I had not graduated when he offered me the position of graduate assistant.

It also suggested that he (Dr. Caballero) and myself in some way conspired to defraud the university in this matter. Nothing could be further from the truth. With the approval of the entire administration involved in this field of employment for the university, and without my knowledge that it was necessary for me to hold a degree to teach as a graduate assistant (since the position was offered to me by the administration) I accepted the position.

When asked if I held a degree prior to the beginning of the Fall semester that year I said "No." With the help of Dr. John Green, (Dean of Fine Arts) and Dr. Caballero, a program was worked out where I supervised and helped students in the evenings with their individual class problems. I issued no grades during this period, nor was I responsible for any counseling or suggestion for grades for students from their instructors.

The statement attributed to me that I felt that Dr. Caballero knew all along that I had not graduated is a shabby, fabricated statement made by irresponsible individuals who are more concerned with sandbagging their positions which are crumbling at their feet due, in my opinion, to a lack of moral fiber and artistic ability.

Respectfully,
Michael C. McCullough

Bicentennial Echoes From the Past

By KATHY GLAZENER

Greater Canyon City, shortly after the turn of the century, consisted of roughly forty shops and businesses and flaunted a population of an estimated 1500.

Conspicuously a scattered community, houses and other makeshift dwellings were thrown together anywhere that there was a dependable source of water. It was a common situation for several neighboring families to share one well.

Canyon City was the name adopted by early cowboys and pioneers to identify the small settlement near the large imposing canyon. In 1911, when Canyon was an identifiable geographic location in its own right, the word city was dropped from most official records without explanation.

Streets in the shopping area were unpaved and unmarked with only hitching posts in front of the stores to restrict the line of traffic. Sidewalks were unknown until Canyon was officially incorporated as a city in 1906. At that time, with much revelry, boardwalks were placed around the square extending to the railroad depot.

Plate glass fronts, or display windows, were a luxury few establishments thought were necessary. Canyon Mercantile was one of the first in the city to enjoy such extravagance. Its dimensions were a spacious thirty by one hundred feet.

Shade trees were another commodity rarely seen. Early residents were disturbed by this fact, since many of them were from climates that were lush with vegetation. This prompted the organization of a forestry association which provided free trees to anyone that would plant and care for them.

Because of the prevalence of wooden construction, fires were a common occurrence. On one occasion, three separate concerns ignited and one building, the thirty-five room Victoria Hotel, was a total loss.

The first brick building in Canyon was the First National Bank. It replaced the frame Stockmans National Bank in 1904, and was erected at 1600 5th Avenue.

With the exception of warehouses, which were numerous, most Canyon merchants located themselves in an area adjacent to the now existing square continuing east on 5th Avenue for several blocks. A new Post Office was built on the west side of the square with the court house directly opposite. At

Eagles Win First Half, But Lose Game To Pampa 20-7

If only the game could have ended at halftime Friday night. Canyon's Eagles, yet to win an outing in their 1975 season, had the tough Pampa Harvesters, a AAAA club touted to be the best to go against Canyon so far, up against the wall during the first half of action Friday night, but the second half proved to be an altogether different story as the Harvesters stormed to a 20-7 victory over Canyon.

The Eagle defense, through the season the only bright spot in a lackluster squad, held Pampa's three college-material running backs to only one first down during the first half of play, while the Canyon offense pushed over for its second score of the year to lead Pampa to a 7-0 margin at the half.

Pampa mistakes and fumbles contributed to the first half success of the Eagles, but Eagle mistakes and fumbles contributed to the second half success of the Harvesters.

Touting running backs with speed, agility and strength, the Harvesters simply overpowered the Eagle defensive unit, which consisted in many instances of Eagle offensive players going both ways.

Nary a Pampa series got started during the first half that it wasn't halted by a Harvester problem.

On their first possession, for example, the Harvesters fumbled on a second down play on their own 28 with John Prater of Canyon falling on the ball to set up a good Canyon scoring chance.

But, the Eagle offense couldn't get moving and after four unsuccessful downs, the Eagles turned over the ball.

After another unsuccessful Pampa and Eagle series, Pampa took the ball on its own 29 to begin another try to paydirt, but again on the second play Mike Glover fumbled and Joe Luquette jumped on the bobble for Canyon. As the first quarter neared its end, however, Canyon was unable to take advantage of the set-up.

After a forced Pampa punt on the following series, Canyon began its first determined drive toward the goal line. As the quarter ended, Canyon owned the ball on the Pampa 31 and seemed headed for success.

With a first down at their opposition's 22, the Eagles moved for eight yards to the 14 and then Ronnie Whitney found the running room restricted. On a third down situation, Whitney took the hand-off and fumbled on the 15 with 260-pound Bruce Ferris of Pampa falling on the ball.

Undaunted, the Eagle defense held Pampa for another series, and the Eagles took a punt at the Pampa 45 to begin the trek downfield again.

In eight plays, the Canyon team had placed points on the board, the series highlighted by a 25-yard pass from Ricky Cooper to Jack Wright, seeing his first varsity action Friday.

Jonathan Hull bulled over from the one for the points and Cooper booted the extra points to give Canyon a 7-0 lead with 6:20 remaining in the half.

The second half opened with a forceful Pampa drive from its own 28 yard line. On the drive, Pampa picked up its second and third first downs of the night and got to the 34-yard line before Quarterback Garland McPherson fumbled and Kenny Basinger covered the pigskin for Canyon.

The Eagles, however, were balked, and turned the ball over to Pampa on the next series.

The Harvesters tallied three more first downs as they drove from the 40 to score with Rick Moore going over right side for four yards.

The kick tied the score at 7 all with 4:30 remaining in the third quarter.

After a series of exchanges on fumbles, Pampa again scored after moving from the 48. Moore went over the right side again for four yards and the score with 11:56 remaining in the game. The kick put the Pampa lead at 14-7.

Pampa scored its final points about five minutes later when Moore again slashed through the right side for six yards and the touchdown. That score was set up by a 67-yard run by Moore to the 16.

The Harvesters threatened again with only a minute remaining in the game. Taking the ball on a first down play, McPherson hit split end Jerry Rhoados who scamped to paydirt. But, the score was called back due to a Pampa penalty and the drive was halted when the Eagles threw Rhoados for a three yard loss on a fourth down play with 50 seconds remaining in the game.

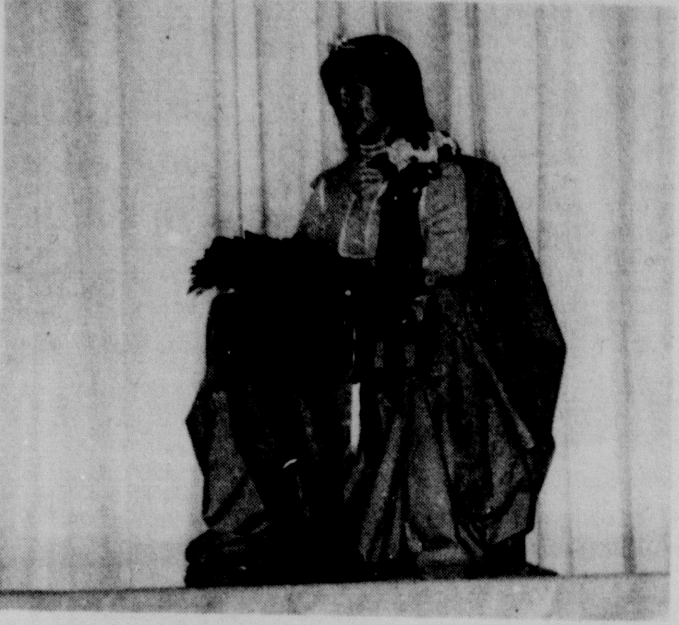

Pampa led the Eagles in the statistics department, tallying 12 first downs to the Eagles' nine. Pampa had 330 total yards, all on the ground, while Canyon had 172 total yards with 25 on one successful pass.

Pampa's leading ground gainer was Moore with 123 yards.

Canyon was led in rushing by Wright with 46 yards on eight carries, followed by Allen Shankles with 26 yards on four carries.

Mavs Take Buffs In Home Game

A 23-point first quarter effort by the UT-Arlington Mavericks broke the will and the back of the West Texas State University Buffaloes Saturday night here and the Mavs went on to an easy 39-7 win over the Buffs before a sparse Kimbrough Stadium crowd of 11,000.

The Buffs' loan score came late in the third quarter of play after an 80-yard drive that consumed seven minutes of the clock and took 16 plays.

Arlington broke the game wide open from the first play from scrimmage during the night. Jimmy Bailey ran from his own 13 after the opening kick-off all the way to the Buffalo 28 yard line for 59 yards that put a scare in the West Texans.

Arlington scored with 12:06 remaining in the first quarter with Chris Walker's boot of a 38-yard field goal.

Other Arlington scores and their times:

*Jimmy Bailey over left guard for 69 yards with 5:01 remaining in the first quarter, capping an 81-yard drive of three plays. Walker's kick was good and the score stood at 10-0 Arlington.

*Capitalizing on a Buff fumble, Quarterback Doug Dobbins ran 11 yards over left tackle for the score. Again, Walker's kick was good for the UTA 17th point. The drive took only two plays from the WT 16.

*Another Buff fumble on the WT 26 set up the fourth Mav score and this time, Dobbins hit Ronnie Barnett in the end zone for 26 yards and the score on the first play of the short series. Walker's kick was no good and UTA held a 23-0 lead with 3:45 remaining in the first period.

*Yet another Buffalo fumble set up the next Maverick score after Tully Blanchard fumbled on a pitch-out on the UTA 41. With 6:27 remaining in the half, Derrick Jensen went over left guard for the final five yards of an 59-yard drive for the Mavericks' 29th point. Walker's kick was blocked.

*Another fumbled pitch-out resulted in the final score by the Mavericks in the first half. Taking the ball on the WT 26 following the bobble, Arlington moved in six plays 26 yards with Craig Carney going up the middle for a yard and the score. Walker's kick made it 36-0 in favor of the Mavericks with 49 seconds on the first half clock.

*On the first series of downs in the second half, Arlington drove, after a Buffalo fumble of the kick-off, for 29 yards in eight plays for the final score. Walker booted his second field goal of the night for the 39th and final point for the Mavericks with 10:55 remaining in the third quarter.

Arlington led in the rushing department with 418 total yards while the Buffs mustered 232. The Mavericks had 20 first downs to 10 for the Buffaloes.

It leaves a nice, warm glow for quite a while.

Month after blissful month I've been following this routine. And then it happened. It was my turn to have circle at my house. It's only fair and I knew it would happen but just like a compulsive eater who knows what eclairs will do to a figure, but can't stop eating them because they taste so good, the months of pleasant Bible study outweighed the fact that one day it would be my turn to hostess this little get-together.

The warm glow left and I was beset by cold fear.

The preparations involved in a brief morning visit with 12 women are monumental even when a house is fairly clean. Especially is this so when the company is due to arrive at 9:30 a.m. Twelve folks in the evening isn't so bad because you have all day to get ready and plenty of time to prepare food.

But at 9:30 in the morning, with sunlight pouring in in spite of the fingerprints and jelly smears on the window, it's difficult to overlook the stack of ironing, the kids' tennis shoes on the coffee table, and the other tell-tale signs of a neglectful wife.

So I cleaned to the best of my abilities. With the baby balanced on my hip, I vacuumed the rug — stopping on occasion to pull out a hair ribbon or shoelace or barrette.

I frantically threw my best vinyl table cloth over the table and hoped the ladies wouldn't notice the bumps underneath which I hadn't had time to worry with — that half a hot dog, apple core and crumbs from a couple of twinkies.

Hubby wasn't too encouraging as he watched my frantic house cleaning.

"Honey," he assured me pleasantly, "don't worry about it. This is a good lesson to the ladies in accepting someone as they are."

"Very funny," I replied as I threw clothes, toys, dirty dishes and the baby in the clothes hamper. "They won't have a place to sit if I don't find the chairs soon and I have to wash the dishes because I don't think they'd understand it if they had to all share the only clean fork."

"All you need is a little organization," Hubby said, and I took his advice.

The morning arrived and I had everything carefully scheduled.

At 6 a.m. I was going to awaken and set the table and straighten the house.

At 7 a.m. the kids would wake up and I'd feed and dress them. At 8 a.m. D'Arcy would leave for school and I was going to start my coffee cake.

At 8:30 a.m. I'd dress and by 9 I would be rested and begin to welcome my guests.

At 6 a.m. I awakened and began to set the table as planned. But I couldn't find the coffee pot and I began to search in all the cupboards, then closets and then likely places, finally locating it in the box of Christmas ornaments in the attic.

At 7:30 the kids were still sleeping and I awakened them and started dressing them while I fixed their breakfast. I couldn't find any clean training pants for Julie, D'Arcy couldn't find her blue barrettes and they both wanted the cereal we ran out of yesterday.

Undaunted and still on schedule, I began the coffee cake when the electrician I had expected the week before showed up to give me an estimate on some wiring.

Right before the ladies arrived, I had time to slip into some clothes and throw napkins, cups and plates on the table.

I greeted my guests huffing and puffing but looking them straight in the eye hoping they would do the same and not look up to see the spider webs or down to see the cookie crumbs under the rocker.

I was tense during the whole ordeal, fearful someone would need to go to the bathroom and find a dirty diaper floating in the toilet.

But, by the time all the ladies had left, that nice warm glow overcame me again. It was over and for 12 more months I could blissfully attend circle meetings without a worry.

Not only that. These were good Christian folks who would surely go home and pray for me and next month's hostess.

Decision. . .

precinct cannot vote for a county trustee. Jacobs believes Hendricks will provide the swing vote to place the board's majority on the side against further annexation efforts by Amarillo.

Thus, his conclusion that for awhile, anyway, the appeal decision rendered Wednesday on the Glendale property is of relative short-term unimportance in the overall question of Amarillo annexation of Canyon school district lands.

The long-term importance of the decision, however, is not so clear-cut.

The terms of Barker, who is an at-large trustee, Turpin and Gist expire in April 1976 and the three are up for re-election or challenge. The terms of Purcell and Hendricks expire in April 1977.

While the complexion of the board might change at any of those election dates, with the addition of new officials, for the long term the importance even of the county school board is questionable given a new law passed last spring by Texas legislators.

House Bill 206 provides that after Dec. 31, 1978, state funds will no longer be used to support the county school board. The bill provides, though, that ad valorem taxes can be used to support the board.

If ad valorem taxes are not assigned to continue the board, the powers and duties of the board, one of which is the decision-making power in cases of land annexation, will be transferred to the Randall County commissioners court.

How county commissioners might react to petitions for detachment and annexation is, at this point, unknown. However, two of the current commissioners, John Fulgenzi and Dee Griffin, represent largely Amarillo county precincts. Only Commissioner Paul Lindsey represents a precinct of rural residents and Canyon itself.

The significance of the state education commissioner's appellate decision is also clouded by other actions which have come after the Canyon school board filed appeal of the county board's decision last Oct. 25.

Since that time, major land developers in the South Amarillo area have chosen either to voluntarily remain in the Canyon district or have approached other avenues to convince the Canyon school board that detachment of their lands is in the local district's best interest.

The developers of Estacado Estates on Bell Avenue in South Amarillo have stated their satisfaction in being in the Canyon school district and have offered a tract of land for possible use as an elementary school site.

Canyon school board members will go into executive session Monday night to consider the land offer, having virtually concluded that construction of a new elementary school in the north part of the county is necessary.

Wilton White, who represents the developers of the subdivision, has also pledged the developers' support of any efforts by the Canyon board to float a bond issue of between $5 million and $6 million for new schools in the north part of the district.

Another key developer in the South Amarillo area, Emmett Fuqua of Quin Sabe Investment Corp., has offered $100,000 to the Canyon district in exchange for the local board's approval of the transfer of his land and another 300-acre tract into the Amarillo School District.

His development adjoins the Puckett Place subdivision in Amarillo.

School board members have heard Fuqua's offer but have tabled action on the proposal until the legal ramifications of the offer have been fully researched by their attorney, Elton Cox of Canyon.

However, Jacobs has questioned the legality of allowing a portion of the Fuqua property to be annexed by Amarillo, noting that on much of the property to the south of Amarillo no school children are involved.

Because of the change in complexion of the county school board, Jacobs says he has no assurance that if the Canyon district accepts Fuqua's offer and other similar offers the county school board might not refuse to go along with the annexation of the property.

If local school board members view the significance of the Glendale decision in the same light as does Jacobs, it is possible they will decide to drop the case and decline to file an appeal of the education commissioner's decision to the state education board.

Jacobs believes that at best the local board could appeal no farther than the board of education any way even though the right of appeal extends through the state court system.

He cites the recent statement by Bob Davis, financial advisor for the school board, that as long as the school district is involved in a dispute concerning the boundaries of the district, no bonds can be approved for issuance by the state attorney general.

Since the school board tentatively plans to issue bonds, provided the issue is okayed by voters in an election now set for early December, to finance construction of new schools, Jacobs said, the continued appeal of the decision could impact adversely on that ability.

If the school land annexation decision rendered by the county board and upheld by the state commission has little short-term impact on the local district and uncertain long-term impact, it has no impact on the ruminations of the school board concerning construction of new schools, Jacobs said.

Only 10 children were involved in the Glendale subdivision, and virtually no children are living on lands now being pushed by developers for annexation by the Amarillo district.

With continued rapid growth of school-age population in Canyon and areas well below Amarillo's outer perimeter, he says, the Canyon district will need a new high school and a new elementary school even if more land is annexed by the Amarillo district.

Board President Tom Keeling has reiterated this feeling several times before various study committees in Canyon, noting that the ultimate decisions on annexation of property will not change the fact that new schools are needed in the district.

Even though the property of Fuqua and other South Amarillo developers is practically devoid of houses and, thus, children, even if other areas adjacent the Amarillo district considered annexation by the Amarillo district, it would be up to the residents of the area in question to petition for such a move, according to state law.

Council. . .

evaluations be handled at the departmental level.

In his presentation, Malzahn argued for the use of student evaluations of faculty members in the university-wide tenure and promotions committee as one determinant of merit on the part of the faculty member.

He argued that the determination of merit of a faculty member cannot be made in a situation other than one involving competition between the faculty member and all other faculty members.

Malzahn contended that because the university has each year only limited money for rewarding merit, it would be unfair to allocate funds on an equal basis to each school of the university and ask each school to determine those who would be promoted or receive salary increases.

Pointing to the fact that some schools and colleges are much larger than others, Malzahn said this would, in effect, limit the merit potential of faculty members since merit is not spread evenly and proportionally in each school and college.

For these reasons, he said, the determination of merit should be done by a university-wide committee, which can review the merit arguments of individual faculty members without a specific school or college quota system.

Noting that currently a university-wide committee does make the merit determinations, Malzahn said the most important factor in figuring merit of a faculty member is his teaching effectiveness.

The student evaluation, which was originally tested and put into effect in 1972, is an aid to the university-wide committee in measuring teaching effectiveness, he said.

It is one tool which can provide comparable input for each faculty member.

"In the evaluation of teaching effectiveness, student evaluations are considered one important type and I think very strongly it is significantly useful in helping in the evaluation of any faculty member," he said.

Students, Malzahn said, "have the best opportunity to observe instruction and the whole learning system."

"Students are not completely ignorant of instruction and instructors and what good teaching is. By the time they come to West Texas State, hardly one of them has not been a student for at least 13 years, and they have a pretty good concept of what good instruction is."

In addition, Malzahn said, research and study through the years has validated the student evaluation of faculty as a tool for assessing teaching effectiveness.

Shelly questioned Malzahn on whether the administration had not misled the faculty on what uses might be made of the student evaluation originally.

Malzahn agreed that originally, the evaluation had been made available to faculty members only for their own use and was not used to consider promotion and merit raise and tenure for faculty.

But, he said, the original purpose of the evaluation changed over the years, with the agreement of the tenure and promotion committee, and now the evaluation is used as a tool by the committee to determine merit of faculty members.

While Shelly asked at what exact point the purpose of the evaluation changed, he did not ask Malzahn whether faculty members had been informed of the change in purpose.

Malzahn told the council that the use of the student evaluation by a faculty member to prove teaching effectiveness when being considered for promotion or tenure is voluntary and the faculty member is free to use any other method to prove teaching effectiveness.

Chamber Planning Breakfast

Directors of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce will finalize plans Monday night for an upcoming chamber membership breakfast and West Texas State University homecoming.

The directors are to meet at 6:30 p.m. Monday at the community center.

A Chamber membership breakfast is planned for 6:45 a.m. Oct. 16 at the community center, sponsored by the WTSU President's Council.

Homecoming for WTSU, which will include a barbecue, parade and other festivities, will begin next weekend.

A report from Phil Langen, chairman of an ad hoc chamber-appointed committee on parks and recreation, will be given the directors.

A nominating committee report will also be presented by President Weldon Trice.

defendant, being chairman of the board, would not listen to their complaints for many months, causing the plaintiff's bank a substantial financial loss to the minority stockholders, and a large personal gain to the defendant."

The suit alleges that on other occasions Whittenburg has specifically "instructed bank employees to work on business owned and operated by the defendant and his family" with the salary for the employee paid from the bank.

Whittenburg has allowed and is allowing members of his family to become overdrawn in substantial amounts, the suit contends, with the bank sustaining losses in interest which might be earned on the money.

"On other instances, defendant Whittenburg has directed that the bank pay from bank's funds debts which were the financial obligation of the defendant himself, and that of his immediate family," says the suit.

The suit also alleges that on other occasions the president has made financial decisions in his loan-making capacity not in the best interest of the bank "and which were motivated solely by his own personal benefit and gain."

Because of these acts, says the suit, the books and records of the bank should be audited by an independent auditing firm with the current status and condition of the bank to be reported to judge and jury and a judgment should be rendered for the bank against Whittenburg.

"Because of the manner in which the defendant has conducted the operation of the bank's business affairs, and his apparent and obvious desire to operate it at his own personal benefit and gain and that of his immediate family, he has displayed that he has a lack of fitness to be the executive officer of such bank," the suit alleges.

"Plaintiff, therefore, requests this court to remove him from such corporate capacity and to appoint a qualified successor president to serve and to guard the assets of the bank."

The suit has been filed in 181st district court in Canyon.

Ricky's Fund Growing

Funds continue to mount at the First National Bank and West Texas State Bank for the medical care of Ricky Valdez, 11.

Ricky's physician reported on Thursday (Oct. 2) that following his examination of the child, "Ricky is in a state of remission due to his current therapy — and that therapy will be continued."

Trust accounts for Ricky's medical needs are handled by the Canyon Community Family Services Organization. From the trust accounts, according to Carmen Hernandez of the CCFSO, a portion of the hospital bills and doctor bills have already been taken care of.

After the success of the community projects the past few weeks, Mrs. Hernandez was elated to hear of the current "remission status" of Ricky's disease.

Next week end the VFW Post and Auxiliary of Canyon will host a dance at the VFW Hall, north of the city, with proceeds going toward future needs of the child. The Panhandle Singers will play from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. with tickets selling at $3 for singles or $5 for couples that evening.

"We have also contacted the City Commissioners and County Commissioners to see about continued aid for the medical care of this young man," stated Mrs. Hernandez, "and they are studying the situation at present."

Potter D.A., Professor Clash Over Parole

Potter County's district attorney and a West Texas State University government professor butted heads in debate Thursday night here over the usefulness of the current Texas parole system.

Tom Curtis of Amarillo and Dr. Brent Lynch, an attorney and criminal justice professor at WTSU, argued the parole system before an audience of about 60 at an interdepartmental seminar at the Episcopal student center.

Curtis, who made headlines recently when he called for the junking of the current parole system, contended convicted felons should be given a flat sentence with no chance of parole and then released from prison to return to society.

Lynch, former director of the Board of Pardons and Parole for the state of Utah, averred that economy and logic would argue for retention of the current system although improved.

Economics alone, Lynch said, argues against sending convicts to prison without chance for parole because parole not only turns a man back into productive society but also relieves the prison system of the burden of financing the man's incarceration.

Lynch said the institutional cost to handle the volume of prisoners which would be required should Curtis' plan be invoked would approach the $6 million mark just for new facilities.

The current parole system, Lynch contended, has not been tried even though in effect.

He noted that there are 88 parole officers in Texas and only two parole officers in the 26 counties of the Panhandle.

If a key to the success of the parolee is the supervision he is under by a parole officer, Lynch said, the Texas system has failed only because it has not tried to make the system work.

"Why do away with parole?" he asked. "We've never even tried it."

Lynch proposed as an alternative system, however, that convicted felons be given a mandatory undeterminate sentence, serving until professional counselors decide he is rehabilitated enough to society. Then, he urged, a good and well-manned system of parole supervision should be implemented so that if the released convict slips up he can be returned to prison promptly.

Lynch admitted his proposal has taken a beating in studies of the problems of today's correctional system, but contended that it would be better than having a man serve flat time in prison to be released on society without the benefit of parole supervision.

Curtis countered that were an indefinite sentence system implemented, prisoners would be compelled to try their best to make the officials believe their rehabilitation complete so as to gain an early release.

He contended that a prisoner who knows he will serve five years and not a minute less, will spend his time in prison preparing himself to re-enter society. On the other hand, he said, the prisoner who believes his behavior can effect an early release will spend his time devising ways to convince the powers-that-be that he is rehabilitated.

In addition, Curtis said, the program could work without parole if society itself changed its attitude toward convicts and enabled them to re-enter the work force with their debt to society satisfied.

Constitution Debate Set

A West Texas State University government professor and a local attorney will take opposite sides Monday as they urge Randall County commissioners to take a stand on the upcoming constitutional amendment election.

Dr. Walter L. Shelly, who is also chairman of the WTSU Faculty Council, is scheduled to urge commissioners to take a contemplated resolution against the proposed constitution, which voters will ballot on Nov. 4.

Gene McGlasson, a local attorney, is to urge commissioners to pass the resolution, drawn by County Judge Woody Pond, which expressed the commission's opposition to the proposed document.

Commissioners have considered for two meetings a resolution drawn by Pond calling on local voters to cast ballots against the proposed new constitution. They have postponed action on the vote until Commissioner Paul Lindsey returns from a trip to the East Coast.

The resolution, which in strong language rejects the proposed constitution on the grounds it would be too costly and would allow Texas legislators too much freedom, would be passed on to the Texas Association of County Judges and Commissioners if approved by Randall County's commissioners.

The resolution is the first formalized expression of disapproval of the proposed constitution in Canyon since legislators finished sitting as a constitutional convention in the summer of 1974.

Pond was instrumental during that convention in altering proposals to change the state's judiciary system.

Other matters scheduled for commission consideration Monday include a resolution which would provide federal funds for the county to replace county road signs with federally-approved signs. Under the program, the county would pay for poles and maintenance.

Vending machines and maintenance supervision for the new Randall County courthouse annex in South Amarillo will also be discussed during the session.

Commissioners meet at 1 p.m. in the courthouse.

'Little Angels' Opening Community Concert Series

"The Little Angels," a national folk ballet troupe from Korea, will be performing at 3 p.m. today, October 5, at Canyon High School auditorium as the first presentation of the current Canyon Community Concert series.

Admission to the performance is limited to those holding memberships in the CCA here. Area townfolk bearing CCA membership cards will be admitted on the reciprocity exchange program.

While in Canyon, the young troupe of "Little Angels" are houseguest of local CCA members. The troupe of 32 (including 29 girls and 3 boys) bring with them not only many gorgeous changes of costume, exotic stage props, and fascinating ancient instruments, but also a dance tradition extending back into the mist of antiquity.

Throughout the ages, people of Korea have greatly revered and preserved the unique blend of natural beauty, artful symmetry, and the sense of exhilaration—at times quiet and at others most vivacious—which sets their art apart from the sometimes (to Western eyes) static dance forms of other Oriental lands.

Even the more than fifty musical instruments played by the "aak" or court music orchestra, consisting of distinguished faculty members of the Korean National Court Music Academy in Seoul reflect this ancient tradition.

The origins of such musical exotica as the a-thaing (7 string zither "bowed" with a stick of polished forsythia wood), the chang-ko (an hour-glass shaped drum), and the saing (a 17-pipe mouth organ) probably pre-date written history, but the instruments used today are for the most part exact replicas of their ancient forebears.

The thirty-two magical miniatures who bring us this ancient art are rather short on history themselves, since their ages range from eight through fifteen years. They have, however, been undergoing vigorous training in their demanding craft as has been customary since the group's founding in Spring, 1962, under the direction of Miss Soon Shim Shin, Korea's most distinguished choreographer and foremost dancer. Many of the children are Gold Medal winners in the Arts Festival of Korea. They are the elite in Korean folk dance.

The Little Angels' performance is part of a coast-to-coast tour of the United States arranged through the joint efforts of the Ministry of Public Information of the Republic of Korea and Korean Cultural and Freedom Foundation, Inc., of Washington, D.C., whose Founding President is the famous and distinguished Admiral Arleigh Burke. Former Honorary Presidents have included the late Presidents Harry Truman and Dwight Eisenhower.

When the Little Angels performed at the Mexican Olympics International Fine Arts Festival, a leading American critic wrote, "The Little Angels wove a spell of Oriental magic which held the international audience spellbound."

The artistry of these Angels has received the supreme recognition and accolade of a command appearance in the White House before the President of the United States, and they performed for two consecutive years on the Ed Sullivan Show. One U. S. tour was highlighted by fourteen appearances in Lincoln Center alone.

During a recent tour of the U.S., they received an invitation from Queen Elizabeth of England to appear in a Command Performance midpoint in their 11 weeks of American performances. To make possible the fulfillment of the Royal Command, two Community Concert Associations agreed to change their dates in order that the troupe could fly in the late evening of November 13th from Washington, to arrive in London on the 14th, perform the 15th and return to the U. S. on the 16th.

During recent years the company has given many performances in its native country, and this year American audiences will once again thrill to the sparkling artistry of the LITTLE ANGELS during their eighth tour of the United States.

The eighth concert tour of the United States by the "Little Angels", national folk ballet troupe from Korea, will include a program today, Oct. 5, at 3 p.m. in Canyon High School auditorium. The program is sponsored by Canyon Community Concerts Association and will be open to those holding current membership cards in the association.

Suzanne Oltjen, 32 Succumbs To Cancer

Funeral services were held Saturday morning at 10 a.m. for Suzanne Oltjen, 32, of 1219 4th Avenue, Canyon.

Mrs. Oltjen died Thursday morning at her home after an extended bout with cancer. She was born Oct. 31, 1942 at Horton, Kan.

A graduate of Kansas State University, Mrs. Oltjen taught second grade in Manhattan, Kan. for five years and was married to Allan Oltjen on Aug. 12, 1962.

The Oltjens moved to Canyon three years ago from Clovis, N.M. Mrs. Oltjen was a member of St. Paul Lutheran Church and taught Sunday School with the church here.

She was an involved community resident having worked with Canyon Girl Scouts, as a service chairman with the Randall unit of the American Cancer Society and as a volunteer worker with the Reach to Recovery cancer information organization. She was a volunteer with the Meals On Wheels Service group and was an officer with the Rex Reeves Parent-Teacher Association.

Mrs. Oltjen, whose husband is a local veterinary doctor, was a member of the American Veterinary Medical Auxiliary.

Funeral services were held at St. Paul Lutheran Church in Canyon with Rev. David Melber, pastor, officiating. Pallbearers were Steve Hines, Buddy Price, Kenneth Crossland, George Hanna, Peter L. Petersen, and Don Sheffy.

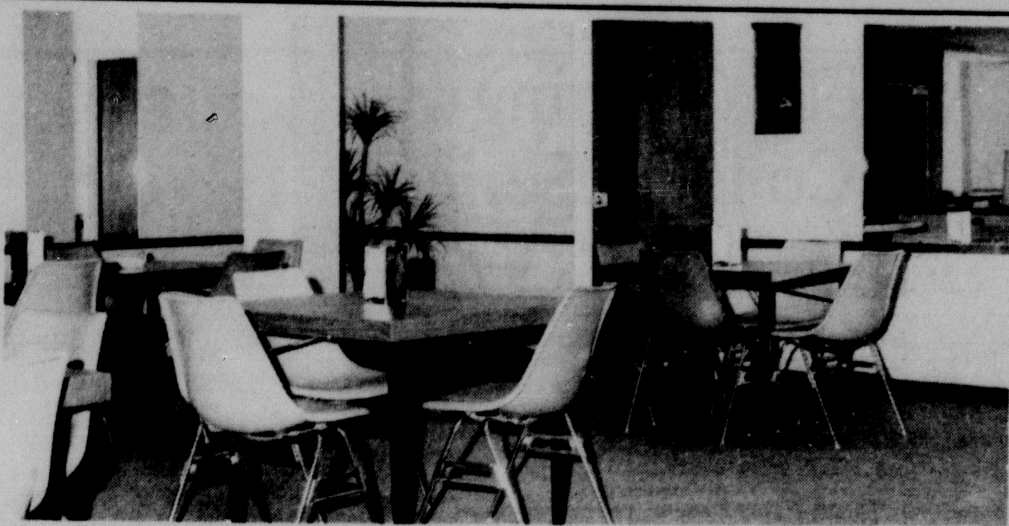

Burial followed at the Upper Wolf Lutheran Cemetery in Robinson, Kan. Local arrangements were handled by Scholer-Gordon Funeral Directors of Canyon.

Survivors include her husband, Allan, of 1219 4th Avenue, Canyon; a daughter, Traci, and son, Bret, of the home; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C.L. Smith of Robinson, Kan.; two brothers, Larry Smith of Minturn, Colo. and Stephen Smith of Topeka, Kan.; and a grandmother, Mrs. George Bollinger of Robinson, Kan.

The family has requested that memorial gifts go to the Randall unit of the American Cancer Society.

News Brief

Last week local firemen from Umberger joined 427 fire fighters from 29 area towns to participate in the Second Canyon Area Fire Control School, which was held at Canyon.

First National Bank's basement will be presented to the public at open house Sunday afternoon, Oct. 5, beginning at 2 p.m. The new coffee room in the basement is framed by mirrors and located between the kitchen and the new community room of the bank.

Date Delayed On Complex

The new city complex is almost completed but it may be as late as mid-December before the building can be occupied.

City manager Glen Metcalf said the delay is due to the furniture and fixtures, which, under the 90-day contract, are not required to be delivered until late November. The city commissioners awarded two furniture contracts totaling $48,000 for office and library furniture to Contract Furniture of Amarillo and Environ Inc. at the Aug. 25 commissioners' meeting.

In addition, a large amount of installation will be required on shelves and fixtures for the library, Metcalf pointed out.

He said he did not expect to move into the new building until all the furniture and fixtures were in place.

"We could move over there before everything came, if we could be functional," he said. "But I can't see opening part of the building before the rest."

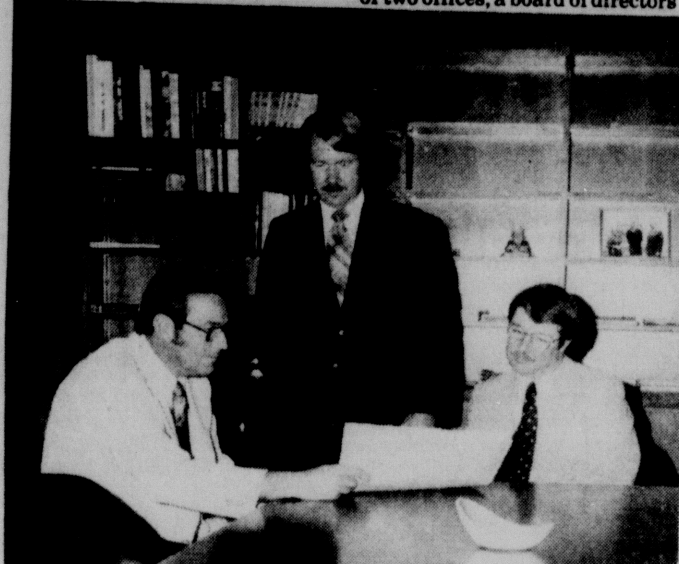

All of the present city furniture is to be used in the new building, he said.

Metcalf said definite plans have not been made for the present city hall, once the building is vacated.

Prof. To Meet

Dr. Hugh Sanders, professor of music and choir director at West Texas State University, will attend a meeting of the music advisory panel of the Texas Commission on the Arts and Humanities Oct. 20 in Austin.

The three-year-old panel will review grant requests and provide ideas and objectives for the commission for future planning.

Open House Today For Bank

Don Max Vars, president of First National Bank in Canyon, has announced plans for an open house to show the completion of the remodeling of the facilities in its building.

The general public is invited to the open house from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m. today.

Guides will be available as visitors tour throughout the bank and refreshments will also be served.

The major phase of the construction was the remodeling of the bank's basement. The remodeling included construction of a stairway entrance to the basement floor from the south end of the bank and construction of two offices, a board of directors room, a coffee room and a large combination recreation and community room.

The main floor of the bank lobby was reconstructed to provide one additional office and a new office for the commercial loan department.

This is the first remodeling of the bank since its construction in 1966 at the bank site on Fourth Avenue and Fourteenth Street, Canyon.

Vars stated that "this remodeling of our bank building at this time vividly demonstrates the complete confidence we have in the economy of Canyon and Randall County."

Bubble Classroom For Kids

BY LAURIE TELFAIR

Have you ever wanted to crawl for awhile into a private bubble, away from the rest of the world?

Two elementary teachers here have created bubbles for their classrooms, where students may go to read or to listen to a story. Made from plastic sheeting and refrigerator tape, the bubbles are inflated by an ordinary electric room fan. Once blown up, the bubbles provide a sense of isolation from the rest of the classroom.

Each teacher uses the bubble differently. Mrs. Yvonne Vandiver, fourth grade teacher at Rex Reeves, made a small capsule large enough for two or three children at a time. Each youngster in her class is allowed ten minutes a day in the bubble for pleasure reading.

She keeps the bubble inflated about 45 minutes every day.

At Gene Howe, Mrs. Anita Harp has built a much larger bubble, large enough for her entire kindergarten class. She uses the bubble for story time and to teach language arts.

Because the bubble takes up so much room in the classroom, Mrs. Harp only inflates it about once a week.

But she feels it is worth the trouble.

"The children listen better and are more responsive because they are in a different atmosphere," she said.

She also uses the bubble to stimulate creative expression.

"It is easier to imagine you are somewhere else when you are lying in the bubble than when you are sitting in your chair," she explained.

Film strips can be shown through the plastic by putting a sheet at one end for the screen.

Mrs. Harp said she would like to have a smaller bubble to use every day, but finds the large size nice for group activities.

Mrs. Vandiver finds the bubble motivates her students to read more.

"The kids really like it," she said. "It builds an incentive to read and helps them learn to share also."

Youngsters who misuse the Meals On Wheels Service Organization officers elected recently for the coming term include: Marion Higdon, seated, as chairman and standing, from left are Jewell Hill, treasurer; Mrs. Tom (Mildred) Cannon, program coordinator; and Mrs. K.E. Frieze, interviews chairman.

Meals On Wheels Has Year Of Growth

The three-year-old Meals On Wheels Service in Canyon has continued to grow with a total of 2,573 meals served through July 1975.

"May was our heaviest month with 315 meals being served" was the report given to the board of directors and general membership at a recent meeting.

The treasurer's report showed that $552.43 was contributed to the service during 1975. The MOW service bank balance stood at $331.86 at the close of July and expenses for the service through July were $3,859 for meals, about $192 for office telephone expense, $13.95 for miscellaneous office expenses and $345.15 for purchase of new food trays.

During the business session new officers were elected including Marion Higdon as president; Jim Underwood, vice president; Lynn Melber, secretary; and Jewell Hill, treasurer. Coordinators for the service are to be directed by Mildred Cannon, programs; Mrs. W.J. Wooten, Jr., drivers; Evelyn Frieze, interviewers; Mattie Sue Howell and Rose Kinzer, office staff; and Jane Stephens, publicity.

Others serving on the board of directors include Sister Marcella Schmalz and Dr. Ruth Lowes, 1 year terms; Frances Yows, 2 year term; and Betty Rathjen, Josephine Friemel and Jim Haney, 3 year terms.

In other business recently, the Meals On Wheels service group voted to continue a newsletter which goes to contributors, workers and local churches.

The MOW also noted that emergency trips to hospitals, dentists and the pharmacies will be provided by Meals on Wheels.
